RW11 Manufacturing Kickoff!

After our design freeze, the team got to work fabricating components for RW11. First our frame tubes came in after being bent and notched, then new members Michael Weber and Nitin Kumar got to work cutting and notching the necessary components for the frame jig. Suspension spacers and components have also begun manufacturing on the lathe, led by new members Sai Ongole and members of our veteran "lathe crew". The brake pedal box has also begun manufacturing with Elliot Carter spending some late nights on the mill. Team members have continued to validate their designs, this is most prevalent through Noah Lovins-Wilusz who built a mock up fuel tank out of polycarbonate to observe the effects of fluid sloshing in the tank. All of these improvements will surely pay off when it is time for our competitions. There is a lot of hard work and long nights ahead of the Warrior Racing team, but our team is ready to take on all the challenges that this year has in store.

The WR on Motor City Static

Since 2015 Warrior Racing has had the support of local radio show, "Motor City Static", hosted by Wayne State Alumni, Ron Wittebols, Chuck Riffenberg, and Jeff Hazard. Team members Erin Kronell, Andrew Cucchiara, Mohammed Kakli, and Noah Lovins-Wilusz were featured on the show earlier this month. The team members discussed their involvement on the team and had a chance to participate in couple of segments on the show as well and loved every bit of it! You can stream the broadcast here: <http://www.motorcitystatic.com/> Please have a listen and we hope you enjoy it as much as we did!

Warrior Racing made the annual trip to the PRI 2016 show in Indianapolis. The team members that went got to meet many of the contacts that help our team produce many of our Road Warriors. Team members also got the chance to meet potential new sponsors and chat with experts in the racing industry. We are very grateful for the support of our sponsors, and would like to thank the companies that attended PRI for visiting with our team members. We hope everyone had a good show, and look forward to seeing them again next year!
